Disatisfied Wheatlanders. Miss Allie Wellman, of Wheatland, Wyo., arrived last night and will visit for a while with the Bents, late arrivals from Wyoming in the vicinity of Freewater. Miss Wellman reports that there is dissatisfaction among the people who flocked into the Wheatland district from all parts of the country about eight years ago, on account of the dearth of rain, and, failing rain, of water from any other source. Others will arrive in this vicinity from that country during the fall, and they are the precursors of a formidable emigration movement from that district.

Human Head Sent From Japan to Minneapolis.

A human head from Japan and a piece of heron feather jewelry from China are the first consignments to reach the Minneapolis postoffice under the new parcels post convention with those countries, says the Minneapolis Tribune. The duty was paid in San Francisco by the importer, a Chinese property holder in the twin cities.

The head has been so altered by secret chemical processes that it resembles a carving in wood. The secret is now known only to one family in Japan, the Tanakas of Yokohama, but was formerly an art known to several South American Indian tribes.

The heads are secured from Canton, China, after beheading and are imported to Japan. The heads are wrapped closely with bandages, and are soaked in different chemicals.

This produces a hardening and shrinking of the fibers and eventually the head is but half the former size and is as hard as wood. During the treatment it becomes a reddish brown but may be bleached to its natural colors.

The heron feather jewelry is one of the strangest creations of the "flowery kingdom," and is manufactured at Shanghai and Canton.

The heron is a difficult bird to capture and there is only one feather in each tail that can be used. This is then cut into minute fragments, which form the basis of a blue enamel. The enamel is used on some of the finest Chinese jewelry. The apprentices who do the work, labor for four years learning the art for their meals, they then work for four years at nominal wages. By this time the fine work has rendered them stone blind and they are turned loose to work as common coolies at the docks for 10 cents a day.

TWO BROTHERS.

Two of my needy brothers begged for aid; I gave both shelter, food and words of cheer. Back to my roof crept one, at dead of night, And robbed me of the fruits of honest toil. The other follows when I walk abroad— Love in his eyes, protection in his mien. Now in God's vast immortal Paradise, Which wins a place?—false friend or faithful dog? Shall death pay love, and life ingratitude? —Chicago American.
